Some Amusing Blunders.

We do sot know whether the recipient of the following letter felt amused or ear god on road ing it. It was written by a Bucknighemshire farmer to a disting rished scientific agriculturist, to whom he felt under obligation for increducing a variety of swine : "Respected Sir.-I went yesterday to the fair at A-. I found several pige of your spicies. There wes s great varie y of bease-; and I was greatly astonished at not seeing you there." We noust imagine this to have been written in an off-hand manner, and without much consideration; as siso an other, by an illiterate farmer, wishing to enter seme asimals at an agricultural exhibition, when he wrote as follows to the secretary of the society: "Enter me also for a jackses. I have no doubt whatever of gaining a prize."

A very slight stretch of imagination is required to depict the amszement of that inquisi ive old genileman, of a bottonical turn of miad, who inquired of the gardener in one of the public pieces of promounder: "Pray, my good With the entydistry, seasoned to the sof fever man, can you inform me if this particular that

> With an indignant tors of the head, she and wored, that she "cared very little ab ut what she are, come red with knowledge," Doubtless the party who put the quistion left more amus d by the answer than the parish priess did, who, observing as Irish , ill at play on a Sunday, accounted her with: "Good morning, daugher of the Evil O o;" when she meckly replied: "Good morning, tach r."

Many an amusing miscake has been made by neaple hard of boaring. We are told that a brapaid on receipt of crice. We guarantee six he at a cure any care. With each order received by us for six boxes accompanied with two dollars, we will send the purchaser our written. discourse happened to be that of extractdinary the delibers, we will send the purchaser our writen and the following standard is said a gentleman, "not less than say a emineur said a gentleman, "not less than say a emineur said a gentleman, "not less than say a emineur barristers in as many months." The Desu, who was very deaf, rose just at the core usion these remarks and gave the company grace; 'For this and every other mercy make us de-voutly thankful." O amother occasine, at a mile tary disper in Ireland, the following was on the tonst list : "May the man who has fust one eve to the gioricus service of his beleved country sever see distress with the other." But the person whes duty it was to read the tosst seeidentally cummitted the important word "diswhich changed completely the sentitress." ment, and caused no end of merriment by the blunder.

Another instance may be quoted if only to show how careful peords should be in express ing thems ves on public occasions. A church South London had been er cled, when a diaher was given, at the conclusion of which the Lealth of the builder was proposed when be wither enigm dically replied that he was more fitted for the scaffe'd than for public speaking."

On the other hand, some mistakes, although anusing are not altogether complimentary How, for instance, would core to enderse an observation which felt from the lips of a gentle man, after gezing at the skeleton of a donkey, and admiring and wondering at the streetule of that despised aximal. "Ah," said he, "we are feerfully and wonderfully made." Equally as good was that of the greenhorn who at a men sgerie was particularly interested in a baboon. Deveral nersons were present, one of whom ex-pressed the opinion that it was of a lower order of the human species. This so nettled the country-man that he immediately exclaimed: Poon, poon! he's no more human spacies than

The late Lord Lansdowne used to relate that when, after Turner the painer's death, he west to the artist's house on a toggy morning in the hope of getting a peep at his reserved works, the old woman in coarge, looking up through the area railings, took him for the car's measuran, and bawing up, told him he "needn't come ng-in as the cat had died the day before"—Chamber's Journal

EDUCATION -- To educate a man is to unfold his faculties, to give him free use of his powers. and especially his best powers. It is first to train the intellect, to give him a love of truth, and to instruct him in the process by which it may be acquired. It is to train bim to soundness of judgment, to teach him to weigh av dence and to guard against the sources of error. It is to give him a thirst for knowledge, which will keep his faculties in acton through life. It is to aid him is the study of the outward world, to mitiate him into the physical sciences, so that he will understand the principles of his trade or business, and will be able to comprehead the phearmens which are continually passing before his eyes. It is to make him that most important means of improvement, self comprehension.
